George Zimmerman

Cashing in on murder? It may seem impossible, but that, sadly, is what is on the mind of villain-extraordinaire George Zimmerman. After his killing of the unarmed, seventeen-year-old, Trayvon Martin, then being acquitted of it, then battering his ex-wife, her father and ipad, he followed such mentally unstable actions with the pointing of a gun at his now ex-girlfriend and then proceeded to eject her from her own home.

Now, in addition to managing to get the state of Florida to cover his legal costs from the Martin case, the reprobate is now auctioning off his so-called artwork to the feeble mass that make up his fan base, which is yet another horrific aspect to the Zimmerman saga.

Shamelessly, the villain has proudly posted his plagiarised faux art, or shart, a more appropriate term considering the shite nature of the work, on Ebay, where the highest bid is amazingly over $100,000.00.

Using all the right buzzwords in his plainting [plagiarsed painting] the piece is nothing to do with art, it's about reaching out to those who profess to be patriotic without knowing what that word, or the words contained in the sentiment in Zimmerman's painting actually mean. Justice for all, really? Real justice would be Zimmerman admitting that he was playing Mr. Security, a fantasy he often fills his empty head with, when he attacked Trayvon for being black in the Zimmerman neighborhood. Real justice is Georgie 'manning-up,' as they say, and accepting responsibility for the fantasy getting out of hand and being afraid, which is what he is, and why he needs weaponry, something his ex-partners would, no doubt, verify. Real justice, nor manhood, is displayed by gloating in the limelight of his acquittal and using that tragedy as an opportunity to profit off the murder. Shame on George Zimmerman, for in reality, he is neither patriot, nor human being. In fact, George Zimmerman is the worst form of villain there is!
